

Into-Being

We can be happy. But we do not believe it. In our alienation we have come to consider happiness as an ideal, or even a utopia. Or, "being happy" is a pleonasm, because "happy" implies "being" and "being" itself means "being happy". But "being" means having a non-egotistical nature, one of the profound Self, merging with the fellow horizontally and vertically with God in Being. Holy Cross ... I do not know if I changed my mind, but until recently I thought that the Being is everything, that there is not a non-existence to Being or existence to non-Being. So happiness stems from a process of being.

In fact, Being and Non-being are just concepts. A concept is a bunch of meanings, an extreme synthesis. We can synthesize thus until silence. How the Upanishads urge: "Sit beside me and be silent ...". Or "the rest is silence." Silence is eternal. Wise it is to live forever. But for this we must go back to the fluidity of the inner experience in direct contact with the true reality, to the flow of the stone, to the investment in perenniality, towards a continuous beginning of the spirit's life in the world, in an inexpressible sacredness. However, only the wise leave without a trace ... while I remain and scratch these sign-words.

I would like to regain the wisdom from birth, the knowledge before knowledge and that innocent purity. I'm trying to return to that place where life breathes primarily, where is the beginning and the end, Alpha and Omega. I would like to become a valley under the sky, a sacred vessel from which only babies can drink the water of life. Yesterday it snowed. Looking at the large snowflakes falling I thought that people are the same, each one displaying their beauty for a while, then merging, passing from the seen to the unseen, to return here more beautiful. This is life, with its sublime poetry. For days will come when life itself will become a luxury, this life that arises from nothing. When nothing will be accessible, because we neglected it, life will become a luxury.

We begin to live from one, in the most individualistic way possible, but we have betrayed origin, I forgot the zero. Only recently, physicists have begun to talk about "zero point energy". It comes from nothing, comes from the vacuum, where the energy is inexhaustible, zero is just a crossing gate. Energy is a good vehicle for information. And information brings us truth. Thus ignorance disappears, which is the root of all evil. Theory in its original meaning that of meditation, overcomes ignorance, beyond space and time. The geometry of an idea does not need time and space and to exit this continuum we need ideas, we need a good theory.

Who will provide it to us? Each one of us, and who will fail has at his disposal the other as consolation (Levinas). Comfort is the thought of touch without touch and, most importantly, it takes down our masks and forces us to sincerity, to the flow of life in a manner not necessarily personal. For, life can erupt in a point that is actually a circle. I miss breathing the infinity from the point. The particle is the kingdom of God. Made out of particles, I am God's people. The Chosen people. Salvation comes through me. My salvation, of course. Someone made me a creature, but I am a creator, I self-created me, do not take this illusion away from me. Otherwise, I get angry and leave into another universe, one already saved, or savior. This is a caressing one. So, comfort yourself with a gesture, with a glance, a breath, comfort your tired lips, on the eyes that have seen too much, on the minds blunted by knowledge, on the souls blunted by hope...

Therefore happiness is possible. Now, here, anywhere. I will tell you a secret: they say that in us there is a great generator of happiness and even of its immortality. It is located between the brains, in the pituitary gland, at the back of the "third eye". The pineal gland is also there, which secretes pinoline, a kind of happiness hormone. But that certain point, which may be the spark of God in man, must be enabled. But how? By Energetic-information, for example by raising the Kundalini, but this is already another story. Meditate, think intensely about this point. Eventually, it may be discreetly and humbly lowered in the heart, where the spirit abides. A big bang of being can occur and then you become the universe that you were in the point, in potentiality. You become the being.
