

EDITORIAL

First, an apology. There was a very significant delay to issues 15 and 16. Subscribers can rest assured that the problems leading to the delay have now all been entirely resolved.

Secondly, an announcement - issue 18 and onwards will be produced by Cambridge University Press. From the point of view of subscribers, the switch to C.U.P should be seamless, and will require no action on their part.

THINK aims to be topical and this issue certainly manages to be. It contains three responses to Richard Dawkins' The God Delusion. The fact that all three responses were unsolicited demonstrates just how provocative a tome Dawkins has produced. Following gold-medallist Marion Jones' recent admission to taking banned drugs, we also have a very relevant piece by Carl Thomen on doping in sport.

Plans for forthcoming issues include contributions by John Cottingham on the meaning of life, Richard Swinburne on good and god, Marc Hauser on morality and Paul Kurtz on religion.
