Editorial

We have initiated year 2009 with several publications that include very important issues which are connected by one of the most important elements of social life and management: Ethics. In a more concrete way the authors discussed topics related with the impact of extreme events from the environment, the attitude of students toward the teaching of corporate social responsibility in business graduate schools, the adaptation to environmental threats, corporate social responsibility explained by neuroeconomics: the daena model, participative democracy and its origins, space and levels of participation. In addition, these ethical issues in this opportunity are complemented with research studies about methods and strategies for law teaching and learning, coaching as a tool of leadership for the development of teams of high performance in the area of sales, probabilistic distributions of common use, impact of training in an electrical field company and educational computer science in higher education.

It is a pleasure to outline that the research journal Daena: International Journal of Good Conscience has started its fourth year of activities promoting research on issues related to management, ethics, philosophy and education, consolidating itself at the international level, establishing relationships with academic and research institutions from a great diversity of countries.

The editorial committee thanks profoundly the collaboration of the researchers that have published their assays and research reports in our pages making great contributions in the generation of new knowledge and in the promotion of the academic debate.

We take this opportunity to make recognition to the support from The Zarathushtrian Assembly of California, and particularly to Dr. Dariush Irani, because without his valuable help our journal would not exist.

Wishing you radiant happiness,

Dr. José Luis Abreu Quintero & Dr. Mohammad Badii
